Jon Favreau's Quotes to Inspire you Towards Success

- I like happy endings in movies. I think life has a happy ending. When it's all said and done, it's all something worthwhile, and I want my movies to reflect that. There are enough things to be sad about. When you pop in a movie, let the message be one that's one of hope.
- When I'm working with improv people, I give them the green light to just bring it and try things.
- The ultimate storyteller is Shakespeare, who was able to get the 'groundlings' to laugh at his bawdy humor and storylines but could still be studied by scholars to this day for the complexity of his language, meter, and symbolism. That's the real guy.
- The irony is that the more unapologetically sexist men are in movies, the more women tend to be attracted to them in person.
